

NOW IN ATLANTA

FRANKLY, MY DEAR...

Acclaimed author Margaret Mitchell left her mark on Atlanta as only she could June 30, 1936, with the release of what would become a classic novel, Gone With the Wind. Now, today's Atlantans can spend their weekends watching the 1940 film rendition while sitting next to staple jewelry pieces from the movie, thanks to Julien's Auctions' (julienslive.com; juliensauctions.com) online bidding Nov. 18—dubbed Property From Joseff of Hollywood: Treasures From the Vault—boasting coveted items from famed jewelry purveyor Joseff of Hollywood; think Rhett Butler's handmade cigar case and watch chains, alongside Scarlett O'Hara's diamond and amethyst necklaces. To top it all off, vintage pieces worn by nationally lauded icons in America's film history will also make an appearance during the auction, including a pearl necklace worn by Bette Davis in The Virgin Queen, dazzling gold earrings donned by Marilyn Monroe in the 1953 film Gentlemen Prefer Blondes, and a serpent cuff and belt fitted for Elizabeth Taylor's role in Cleopatra. Let the bidding begin! —Ashton Pike
